County Employees Recognized for Positive Performance

57 employees grab the spotlight at Positive Performers Breakfast

At a Positive Performers Breakfast on Thursday, Aug. 8, Charleston County Government took the time to recognize employees who received acknowledgement from the people they serve for a job well done.

County employees are tasked with serving the public in a friendly, efficient manner. Sometimes it was a simple “thank you” that made its way up the chain of command, while others took the time to write an email to an employee’s supervisor acknowledging excellent customer service. Those messages of appreciation were returned to employees in the form of a recognition certificate given by Charleston County Administrator Kurt Taylor during the Aug. 8 event.

Taylor set three internal goals when he took the leadership position: customer service, boosting employee morale and certification and accreditation of all County departments.

“It is an honor to serve along with employees who do their jobs so well that that they receive praise from others,” said Taylor. “As I have said before, often in our jobs the public interacts with us not because they want to, but because they have to. It is incumbent upon us to do our best to make that interaction as professional and enjoyable as possible.”
